Emsi

For Workforce Development

Workforce development professionals help people get good jobs and help employers find or train skilled workers. Labor market data is vital to these and other core workforce development functions. With Emsi, you can provide employers with key labor market insights, and you—and the jobseekers you serve—can access local data simply and quickly.

Some ways we help workforce boards:

KNOW WHAT'S IN-DEMAND

Understand the in-demand industries that drive your region—as well as the occupations and skills needed in those industries—with our detailed local data.

EVALUATE AND ALIGN PROGRAMS

Evaluate local gaps and surpluses in training and education in a matter of minutes and better align programs based on local workforce needs.

UNDERSTAND CAREER PATHWAYS, PLANNING, AND SKILLS

Look at skills transferability between occupations, see local employers' skills needs, and analyze real-world career progressions via our résumé database.

SUPPORT ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

Become an integral partner for attracting and retaining local businesses by responding to workforce data requests quickly and efficiently.

BOLSTER BUSINESS SERVICES AND ENGAGEMENT

Target employers within your region's driver industries using our business listings and job posting analytics—and head to meetings with insights into their labor market needs.

DEVELOP RAPID RESPONSE STRATEGIES

Know the potential impacts of employer layoffs and how best to transition displaced workers to careers that fit their existing skill sets—or quickly find new opportunities if they're looking for a change.

ANALYZE REAL-TIME DATA

Get a pulse on the jobs that local employers are actively seeking to fill with our job postings analytics.
